The ear of corn that fetched $250 in Chicago must have been a red one, for husking bee purposes.

Another venerable rear admiral married! Renewed congratulations on the gay and festive retired list.

The late Cassie Chadwick's will bequeathing a million dollars to charity deserves to be probated as an old but grim joke.

"What's the difference between a coal baron seller and a barren coal seller?" asks the Boston Tribune. Something like $13 a ton out Globeway.

Mr. John W. Gates should forward his condolences to Mr. Augustus Heinze. They have each acquired a large amount of experience at the usual high rates.

Alarm in the congressional national council over the decrease in ministers, owing to the allurements of commercial life. The laity should pray for the clergy.

And now we are informed that a chop suey trust has been formed. However, only those with most trusting dispositions will have anything to do with chop suey.

A Tennessee man has discovered a species of worm that eats English sparrows. Hereafter the early bird will do well to watch out and not get caught by the worm.

People who attempt to discuss the doings of canebreaker bear hunting with the president in the future are apt to get almost as glassy a stare as if they had mentioned the tariff.

A Chicago professor claims to have discovered the exact date of the flood. That's good news, provided Professor Haupt doesn't come forth and prove there never was any flood.

Nevertheless, dividends on the stocks of good copper mines average up well in the long run. They have their ups and downs; now come the downs. The ups will come again later.

The Wisconsin supreme court has decided that a cigarette in a tobacco wrapper is a cigar. What we should like to see, however, is a court ruling as to what constitutes a Pittsburg stogie.

Someone is advocating a monument in memory of the man who made the first cocktail. It is generally the man who made the last cocktail that is remembered with more or less regret and remorse.

A Georgia man announces himself for office upon a platform of principles expressed in one lone line, "I want the office because I need the money." Really, it would be a mistake to defeat so honest and frank a man.

Professor Haupt now asserts that Solomon did not write the "Songs of Solomon." A few thousand years from now someone may have the audacity to claim that George Ade never wrote the fables that made him famous.

"The man who carries a baby is a good fellow," says the president. One baby—positive, good; two babies—comparative, better; six babies—superlative, best; seven or eleven babies—extra-superlative, bully!

So far, the list includes Wonderful Washington, Marvelous Manhattan, Hollering Houston, Busy Birmingham, Comfortable Columbus, Ripenorting Richmond, Arid Atlanta and Desolate. Why the others are backward is hard to say.

A Russian newspaper thinks war between Japan and the United States inevitable, but says it will not occur until after the Panama canal has been completed. The wear and tear on Captain Hobson's lungs in the meantime will be something terrific.

As proof positive that poets are born and not made, an Indiana reporter wrote up a burglary as occurring at "some time between the lowering of night's sable mantle and the lifting of the purple veil that heralds the approach of rosy dawn."

CHANGED INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

There are marked indications of a shifting of international sentiment as regards the orient, and the United States is in much better position apparently than it was but a few months ago. When the dust clears away it may be found that much of the change is due to the determination to have the fleet cruise in the Pacific.

After Japan's war with China and it had been forced to Russia, Germany and France to forego the spoils of conquest, the first English-Japan alliance was formed. England was not in position to help Japan in its time of greatest need to meet the "bluff" of the other three greatest powers, but it saw danger to its eastern possessions in the vantage gained by Russia.

The result was that first alliance for mutual help if either country should be attacked by two powers. This made it possible for Japan to undertake the war against Russia and to win. It kept France and Germany neutral.

But the peace of Portsmouth was almost immediately followed by a second treaty of alliance with England, in which Japan gained much and England nothing. It was a pledge of help in any war in which either might become involved, and insured to Japan five years of peace in which to recover from the crushing effects of war expenditures, and the backing of England in carrying its diplomacy to the verge of hostilities. It naturally made the little folks very cocky.

England really had nothing to fear from any source and has gained nothing but trouble. This position has been further emphasized by the recent treaty arrangements with Russia fixing the status quo in the east and removing the last vestige of cause for England's uneasiness as to India and the bordering countries, where its interests lie.

Added to this has been the fact that France alone has followed its lead in a treaty with Japan. Germany and the United States have held aloof, while the jealousy of China of the increasing power and aggressiveness of the Japanese has grown to importance. China has refused to permit Japan to meddle in its affairs, and added cause for this is found in the swallowing of Korea.

China has recently renewed its cordial relations with this country. The boycott is a thing of the past. Secretary Taft's reception was heartily cordial. Forty-five of the guilds engaged in the boycott joined in doing him honor. Neutrally China turns to the United States and Germany at this time, as England and France are tied to Japan's boom.

The United States, by showing its determination not to be coerced or bluffed, has made England realize the possible consequences of its rather precipitate entanglement. It has increased Germany's display of friendliness and has reached to the heart of China. As a bit of diplomacy in action, it has not been so slow.

If Comptroller Ridgley doesn't become a national bank president, he will prove an exception to the rule. About all his predecessors in the comptroller's office have utilized their expert knowledge of the banking business by accepting bank presidencies, to the large advantage and profit of all concerned.

AMUSEMENTS

The Black Flag
Another large audience was at Dreamland last night to see the Spooner Dramatic company in the popular melodrama, "The Black Flag."

The plot hinges around the forgery of a check, and one brother gets convicted for another brother's crime, serves time in the penitentiary, makes a break for freedom, gets captured again, but eventually proves his innocence and gets justice.

He also manages to get a very pretty girl for a wife, and the play ends with everybody happy.

The prison scene in the third act was very realistic and well staged. Between the acts specialties were introduced by Miss Allie Spooner and M. L. Spooner, which were enthusiastically received.

Tonight this excellent company will present one of their very choicest offerings, "Carmen," with Miss Allie Spooner in the title role of "Carmen." This beautiful and intensely interesting drama is too well known to need extensive comment, and no doubt a record attendance will show Globe's appreciation of good, clean acting and high-class productions such as the Spooner company are giving.

The costumes in "Carmen" are exquisite and have created a sensation wherever this play has been presented.

At the Iris
An exceptionally strong program of moving pictures and illustrated songs was put on at the Iris last night.

"The Easterner" is a new sensation picture, showing a very exciting race between a horse and an automobile.

"Cockfighting in Seville" is an interesting picture illustrating a sport very popular with these queer people. "The Great Bull Fight" is the best picture of this kind yet shown here. The two great matadors, Senors Mantantini and Bombita.

"Cab 23, or the Skiddoo Cab," keeps the whole audience in a roar. It is really very funny.

Billy Cummings has two very good songs, "Since Arrah Wanna Marry," Barney Carney" made a hit with the crowd. This is an answer to "Arrah Wanna."

The same bill continues for the remainder of the week.

FOURTEEN MONTHS ON CLAIM

Important Changes in Homestead Regulations Announced

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 24.—An important change in the regulations for acquiring homesteads on the public domain was announced today by Commissioner Ballinger of the general land office. As an additional precaution against fraud, all persons making homestead entries on public lands after November 1 next will be required to prove actual residence on the land for fourteen months before they will be permitted to "commute" the entries to obtain title by cash payment. Heretofore the period of actual residence has been eight months. The ruling will not affect entries made prior to November 1, 1907.

Resolutions of Respect
Globe, Ariz., October 19, 1907.
Whereas it has pleased Him the Father of us all to call from this world our dear sister, Nellie Livingston;
Therefore, be it resolved, while we bow in submission to His divine will, we can but sorrow for our loss. As a sister and friend she was one to love and esteem; as a wife and daughter she was all that life could give. Our fraternal circle is broken; in our home the vacant chair remains; and our loss is her gain. In memory of her let us strive to make life brighter and better for those living.
Resolved, that we extend to family and friends our sympathy and consolation.
Resolved, that the charter of the lodge be draped in memory of our dear departed sister, and the resolutions be spread upon the minutes, and a copy of the same be sent to the family; also that copies be published in the local paper.
